From my desk to yours: Teaching Kindness...Here We Go!

It's February and we see Valentines on the shelves, chocolate hearts in the candy dish. But as parents and leaders of youth I share with you practical ways to foster empathy in children. The following is from "How To Teach Your Kids To Care About Other People" found at huffpost.com.

As deep-seated divisions, vitriol and disturbing news fill headlines, many people are wondering what happened to the qualities of empathy and kindness in our society. In the same vein, many parents are wondering how to raise kids who will be a force for love and goodness in the face of bitterness and hate.

Talk About Feelings

"The gateway to empathy is emotional literacy," said Michele Borba, an educational psychologist and the author of numerous parenting books, including UnSelfie: Why Empathetic Kids Succeed in Our All-About-Me World.

A simple way to foster emotional literacy is by promoting face-to-face communication in the age of texting and smartphones. "Digital-driven kids aren't necessarily learning emotions when they pick emojis," Borba said. "Make it a rule in your house to always look at the color of the talker's eyes because it will help your child tune in to the other person."

Another key aspect is teaching kids to identify their own emotions early on. "Use emotional language with kids. Say things like, 'I see you're really frustrated,' or, 'I see you're really mad,'" Laura Dell, an assistant professor at the University of Cincinnati's School of Education, told HuffPost.

"Before children can identify and empathize with other people's feelings, they need to understand how to process their own feelings," she continued. "Once they can identify their own emotion, they're better able to develop those self-regulation skills to control their own emotions — and then take the next step to understand the emotions of others."

"The gateway to empathy is emotional literacy," said Borba.

Ravi Rao, a pediatric neurosurgeon turned children's show host, believes parents should teach feelings as much as they teach things like colors and numbers.

"You'll see parents walking through the park and taking every opportunity to ask, 'What color is that man's jacket?' 'What color is the bus?' 'How many trees are there?'" he explained. "You can also practice emotion by saying things like, 'Do you see the woman over there? Does she look happy or does she look sad?'"

Rao also recommends playing a "guess what I'm feeling" game at home by making happy or sad faces and asking your children to identify the emotion. "You just get their brains in the habit of noticing the signals on other people's faces."

Service Learning Project

About Teens for Jeans

- This project was selected by delegates in attendance of the 2019 Teen Leadership Conference.
- It is coordinated by the State 4-H Ambassador Program.
- This project strives to ensure that no one has to go without a pair of jeans!

What will this project look like in my county?

- Each county office is encouraged to collect jeans to participate in the statewide community service project.

- Create a jeans drop off location at your county office or at different locations around your community.
- Once the box is full, count the jeans and record it on the 2019-2020 TeensForJeans_CSProject_ImpactReport.

If you are a club who would like to help with this state wide project please contact your county office so we can assist you!

Once kids have a better sense of emotions and how things make them feel, you can ask them about the emotional perspectives of others. “You can ask things like, ‘How do you think it made Tommy feel when you took his toy?’ or, ‘That made Mommy really sad when you hit me,’” said Borba.

Use Media To Your Advantage

Watching TV or reading books together presents another great opportunity to cultivate empathy, according to Madeleine Sherak, a former educator and the author of *Superheroes Club*, a children’s book about the value of kindness.

“Discuss instances when characters are being kind and empathetic, and similarly, discuss instances when characters are being hurtful and mean,” she suggested. “Discuss how the characters are probably feeling and possible scenarios of how the situations may have been handled differently so as to ensure that all characters are treated kindly.”

Borba recommends engaging in emotionally charged films and literature like The Wednesday Surprise, Charlotte’s Web, Harry Potter and To Kill a Mockingbird.

Set An Example

Parents need to walk the walk and model empathy themselves, noted Rao.

“Kids will pick up on more things than just what you say. You can say, ‘Pay attention to other people’s feelings,’ but if the child doesn’t perceive or witness you paying attention to people’s feelings, it doesn’t necessarily work,” he explained.

Rao emphasized the importance of parents using language to convey their own emotional states by saying things like, “Today, I’m really frustrated,” or, “Today, I’m really disappointed.” They can practice empathy when role-playing with dolls or action figures or other games with kids as well. It’s also necessary for parents to recognize and respect their children’s emotions, according to Dell.

“For kids to show empathy to us and others, we need to show empathy to them,” she explained. “Of course it’s tough as a parent trying to get multiple kids to put on their clothes and shoes and get out the door to go to school in the morning. But sometimes it makes a difference to take that pause and say, ‘I see it’s making you really sad that we can’t finish watching ‘Curious George’ this morning, but if we finished it, we wouldn’t be able to make it to school on time, and it’s really important to get to school on time.’”

“It doesn’t mean you have to give in to their wants all the time, but to recognize you understand how they feel in a situation,” she added.

Acknowledge Children’s Acts Of Kindness

“Parents are always praising children for what grades they got or how they did on a test. You can also boost their empathy by letting them know it matters to develop a caring mindset,” said Borba, noting that when children do things that are kind and caring, parents can stop for a moment to acknowledge that.

“Say, ‘Oh, that was so kind when you stopped to help that little boy. Did you see how happy it made him?’” explained Borba. “So your child realizes that caring matters, because you’re talking about it. They then begin to see themselves as caring people and their behavior will match it.”

Make Kindness A Family Activity

Families can prioritize kindness with small routines like taking time at dinner every night to ask everyone to share two kind things they did, or writing down simple ways to be caring that they can all discuss together, said Borba. Playing board games is another way to learn to get along with everybody.

Borba also recommended volunteering together as a family or finding ways that your children enjoy giving back. Volunteering is another great way to promote empathy.

“If your kid is a sports guru, then helping him do arts and crafts with a less privileged kid might not be the best match, but you can find other opportunities for face-to-face giving that match their interests,” she explained. “Help them realize the life of giving is better than the life of getting.”

Families might also consider writing down their own mission statements, suggested Thomas Lickona, a developmental psychologist and author of *How to Raise Kind Kids: And Get Respect, Gratitude, and a Happier Family in the Bargain*.

“[It’s] a set of ‘we’ statements that express the values and virtues you commit to live by — for example, ‘We show kindness through kind words and kind actions’; ‘We say we’re sorry when we’ve hurt someone’s feelings’; ‘We forgive and make up when we’ve had a fight,’” he explained. Lickona also recommended holding everyone accountable to the family values at weekly family meetings centered around questions like, “How did we use kind words this week?” and, “What would help us not say unkind things even if we’re upset with somebody?”

“When kids slip into speaking unkindly — as nearly all sometimes will — gently ask for a ‘redo,’” he said. “‘What would be a kinder way to say that to your sister?’ Make it clear that you’re asking for a redo not to embarrass them, but to give them a chance to show that they know better. Then thank them for doing so.”

Another piece of advice from Lickona: Just look around. “Even in today’s abrasive, angry, and often violent culture, there are acts of kindness all around us. We should point these out to our children,” he said. “We should explain how kind words and kind deeds, however small — holding the door for someone, or saying ‘thank you’ to a person who does us a service — make a big impact on the quality of our shared lives.”

Public Presentations Update

The following rule changes will be implemented starting in 2020:

- Maximum time limit deductions have changed for all Demonstrations, Public Speaking, and
- Illustrated Talks. They will now include a 3-point deduction for the first minute over, and an additional one point deduction per each minute after that.
- Senior age 4-H members must set-up the entirety of their presentation to include: supplies and digital presentation. If a senior 4-H member receives assistance from an adult, with the exception of extenuating circumstances to be determined by the event host, a 3-point deduction will occur to their overall score.
- The following registration change will start in 2020:
  1. Teams participating in Public Presentations will have one member register the presentation via a team lot, at which point they will indicate their teammate(s) and desired time for the presentation.
  2. Additionally, please make sure to emphasize to youth attending state that it is highly advised to bring their presentation on a flash drive, as internet is not a guarantee.

We are also looking for advisor suggestions for judges, so if you know of someone who would be a great fit, please contact Michelle May, Alina Krone-Hedman, or Hilary Risner with their information.

Fruit Sales

It's that time of year again! We will be selling 4-H fruit the month of February. Important things to know:

- ◆ It is important that you collect the money when a customer places an order.
- ◆ All checks should be made payable to "Sanborn County 4-H Leaders".
- ◆ Order forms and money are due to the Extension Office by Tuesday, March 3rd.
- ◆ Fruit will be delivered on Saturday, March 28th. Plan to come help unload the truck and to pick up your fruit for delivery.
- ◆ This year we will recognize our top sellers with a movie ticket for all their hard work. Let's see if we can sell 1,000 items for Sanborn County!

Happy Valentine's Day

New Logos for our County T-shirts

Did you know that we are currently looking for new logos for our two county t-shirts? Right now we are asking 4-Hers and parents to submit ideas for our Sanborn County 4-H Exhibitor t-shirt and for our Sanborn County Shooting Sports t-shirt.

Keep in mind that the 4-H clover should be included in your design. There are certain rules for how the clover can be used - bottom line is that it must be in the format of the official clover. There can be nothing over top of the clover, but the clover can go over other parts of the logo. The clover can be any color.

Deadlines for the new t-shirt logos are:

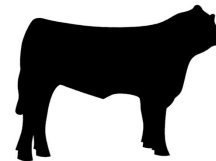

- ◆ Sanborn County 4-H Shooting Sports t-shirt - deadline by February 15th.
- ◆ Sanborn County 4-H Exhibitor t-shirt - deadline by March 31.

SANBORN COUNTY 4-H NEWS
